This is normally a blocked pump in the base. It can be a faulty pump or control but its normally just a blockage. Unplug the appliance. Take the top and left side panel off. Follow the hoses down and youll come to the pump. Take the hoses off, blow up them to ensure they are clean and clear. Take the pump out. Clean out any debris jamming the pump and clean out the pump chamber. Take the condenser out. Clean it out thoroughly, clean out the chamber it fits into. Reassemble and try the machine again. It should now dry and pump the water up to the water bottle. You will need Torx drivers or bits to remove the screws. Can you tell me if my condenser tumble dryer Bosch model number WTE86304GB which I purchased new in March 2008 and has an extended guarantee until March 2011 is supposed to have a reverse action when drying. I am very disappointed with this item; when drying sheets they get all tangled up and roll into a ball and thump around in the tumble dryer; then when I go to take them out it is one heck of a job to untangle them. Please can I have your suggestions to this problem ASAP thank you Submitted 9 years ago. Verified Hiya, Sorry for the delay in answering your question. Ive had to obtain the service manual, user manual and service documents to make sure I gave you the correct information. The user manual makes no mention of reversing. The repair manual makes no mention of reversing. The wiring diagram shows a 2 wire motor which would mean that its single direction. Reversing motors have 3 wires. Sorry, this appears to be a standard, single direction dryer. There is no answer to the problem you have with the sheets, except for the ludicrous one of only drying 1 sheet at a time. I take it this problem has existed since you purchased the appliance. Thanks Ask Your Own UK Appliance Question Customer reply replied 9 years ago Thanks for your reply. You are correct; this problem has existed since I purchased the appliance. Im afraid drying one sheet at a time is not the answer I was looking for.

Even drying one sheet and other items still gives me this frustrating outcome. I am not happy. At the time I purchased this tumble dryer I thought I would go that extra mile and get a good product, so paid quite a lot. I think my only solution is to try and sell it and buy a different one. As I also said in my previous post there is no answer for the problem you are having. Good luck selling it and good luck with the new appliance. I have a Bosch condenser dryer. We are tearing our hair out with this. The only solution is to turn the dryer off, turn it back on again, and let it run for 5 or so minutes until it stops again. I am thinking there must be some kind of sensor in the machine that has become dirty over time, thereby triggering the light to come on and the dryer to stop, but have no idea where it is and would really love to avoid calling a Bosch repairman to come out and fix this problem. Any ideas welcome, thanks for readin!Remove the outer cover, pull out the air cooler cassette and give it a good flush out with a garden hose or use a bucket or two of warm water.
